

International Company Profile Report

A small investment that can open big opportunities.

In today's global business environment, knowing the risk associated with business partners is critical. Business verification ensures stronger relationships, reduces exposure to regulatory penalties, and helps protect yourself from fraud. That's why Experian created the Company Profile report. The Company Profile report enables you to identify risks and build trust more quickly.

Challenges of doing business across international borders

Verifying international business partners is critical to a robust due diligence process. Businesses have been fined millions of dollars for failing to know their customers and doing business with companies across international borders carries elevated risks. Here are some challenges that companies deal with when doing business globally:

- Stiff penalties from failure to meet Know Your Customer requirements.
- Increased exposure to fraud and other risks due to lack of currency, availability, and depth of information on international partners and suppliers .
- Significantly higher costs of acquiring reliable international business information.

Current, actionable information

The Company Profile report sources information directly from Experian bureaus and Tier 1 partners around the world, providing the freshest information available. The report provides a summarized snapshot of key elements associated with a business' identity, including:

- Firmographic information such as name, address, phone number, and Website address (URL).
- Legal name and registration number.
- Business activity indicator showing whether the business is actively trading.
- Industrial classification code(s) and description(s).
- Senior executives and managers.
- Number of employees.
