“In today’s highly regulated and competitive environment, clients must get value from every dollar they spend. When they spend those dollars with us, we need to provide them with results that have a significant impact on their business”

Michael joins Experian from Deloitte where he spent two years providing consulting services to systemically important financial institutions in areas such as regulation, technology, and business risk. Prior to Deloitte, Michael spent over 16 years at Discover Financial Services supporting all aspects of portfolio and acquisitions management, including strategy, analytics, due diligence, technology, and regulation.

He has also spent time in risk management at a number of local banks including the First National Bank of Chicago, Harris Bank, and the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

Michael’s experience on the client side allows him to understand issues clients are facing and permits him to recommend solutions that can be implemented to improve profitability and reduce risk. He also has a deep understanding of analyzing customer data and external data so clients can be confident they have a good foundation for their decisions.
