

Redetermining participant eligibility for state benefits

Over the course of the pandemic, government agencies paused redetermination efforts in response to the Public Health Emergency (PHE). As states look to return to regular operations, it's key that agencies are able to identify the citizens whose eligibility has changed after the PHE officially ends.

Eligibility redetermination restart

Experian provides government agencies with a robust set of tools to help determine eligibility for state benefits through:

- Portfolio analysis: Enrolled program participant's records are analyzed and returned to the state with key eligibility information tags.
- Real-time analysis: Get current participant information in real time with online reports.
- Compliance: Adhere to federal and state program eligibility regulations.
- Affordability: The costs for estimated income scores are far lower than verified income data and can help focus agency resources on the riskiest cases.

Data and Analytics

The key to eligibility redetermination lies in Experian's vast data and advanced analytics. By partnering with us, agencies gain access to improved outcomes and data governance, as well as greater accuracy, confidence, and efficiency.

Data	Analytics
Identity information and residency verification	Data cleansing
Social Security number verification	Master client indexing with a persistent unique identifier
Deceased indicator	Deduplication of identities
Household members	Estimated income band
Overall identity verification and risk detection	Custom risk scoring

What Experian delivers

The Experian Government Services team is dedicated to meeting your agency's distinctive needs. Our extensive data assets, unique analytical offerings and proven track record of adhering to the highest standards in data security and regulatory compliance help government agencies provide public services that are more effective and personal for the constituents who use them.

Industry experience

With more than 50 years' experience in information services, Experian has served public sector organizations of all sizes — including 15 Cabinet-level departments, all 50 states and a myriad of local governments and municipalities.

Partner with an expert

As government agencies continue to face tougher economic challenges and increasingly complex needs, there's no better time to explore the wide array of benefits you gain from working with Experian than now.

Contact us today at 1 855 339 3990 or publicsector@experian.com to learn more.

Contract information Experian Solutions, Inc. | NASPO Cloud Contract AR3101.